TUESDAY, the fifth day of September next, at eleven o'clock, in the forenoon, Five contiguous Plantations,

Amounting together to about 2700 Acres, SITUATE on the river Potomac, and within about three miles of the courthouse. These estates formerly belonged to Presley Thornton, Esq. and are the same on stood, that about 1700 acres of them are as valuable low grounds as any on the river, and

The uplands consist of about 1000 acres, and the whole is well calculated for the production of corn, wheat, tobacco, timothy, and small grain of all kinds, in great abundance. The waters are said to abound with excellent fish, oysters, and wild fowl. The water carriage is easy and convenient to Norfolk, Ba-good mill seats, with an abundance of water,

of payment may be known a sufficient time

HYMN ON DEITY.

ASCRIBED TO ORPHEUS.

[Orpheus was one of those heroes who embarked in the Argonautic expedition, in the 79th year before the taking of Troy.—The Poems which pass under his name, are, by Aristotle, attributed to a Pythagorean philosopher, named Cecrops. Most of the moderns ascribe them to Onomacritus, tyrant of Athens, B. C. 546. The author, whoever he was, had, undoubtedly some acquaintance with the Jewish Scriptures.]

I SPEAK to years initiate. Far remov'd
Be every vulgar eye. Thou only, Moon,
Rolling full orb'd in silent majesty,
Witness my song. I utter truth's sublime; Truth's, which the soul exalts. In mute attention
Listen; for I proclaim a DEITY!

The Almighty One, self born, all glorious Exists, Creator blest, wide nature's sov'reign Invisible to mortal eye; but he,
Watchful forever, guards his boundless works.

He, of his goodness, chastens man; he sends War, famine, pestilence. He, he alone,
Uncounselled, governs and directs the whole.

O, come with me, my friend adoring trace,
In all his works, the footsteps of a God.
His hand sustains, his powerful arm upholds
Creation; he himself invisible;
For clouds and darkness shroud him. He re-mov'd
High in the heaven of heavens, dwells not with man;
No eye beholds him, save the Son belov'd,
Of wond'rous origin, Chaldea's hope.

God in the heaven resides. The rolling world,
The star bespangled firmament, the sun,
Evening's mite lamp, creation's utmost bounds Extended lie before him. He directs
The ceaseless flow of ocean. He, in storms Rides on the whirlwind, hurls the fire of heaven.

God in the heaven's resides. He spreads his arms
To ocean's utmost bounds. At his approach
The mountains tremble; from their bases leap
The everlasting hills. To his high power
Earth bows submissive. He, the first and last.

No more, I tremble to proclaim his power;
God, from on high, the universe sustains.
My friend, restrain thy lips. In silent awe,
Bow, and adore the wonder working God.

PROSPECTUS

INDEPENDENT AMERICAN

AND

COLUMBIAN ADVERTISER,

A NEW PAPER:

To be published by Edgar Patterson, in George-Town, District of Columbia.

At the commencement of a periodical work, a prospectus is generally expected, in which the editor is not only to explain his views and develop his plan of publication, but to give a specimen of his learning and abilities—his dexterity at fine writing, and his knack at rounding a period and squaring a paragraph. These addresses, or whatever they may be called, are frequently filled with pomposity and promises, and are often the best, and sometimes the only efforts of their authors. As we are about to commence a periodical publication, and as we have no disposition to alter the course of nature, or even to abrogate established customs, we here present our PROSPECTUS.—But we would not have our readers be disappointed, if they should find here no fine writing, and very few fair promises. We shall promise nothing but what we mean to attempt and we hope to be enabled to perform.

After this short introduction, we proceed to explain the plan which we have marked out to ourselves in conducting our paper.

The Politician being the greatest reader of Newspapers, we shall first inform him what political character he may expect us to assume. In this respect we are resolved to manifest the most avowed INDEPENDENCE. We will belong to ourselves; and scorning to fall into the ranks of any party, we will examine and expose the designs of all, and give them our censure or our praise, only as they may appear to us to deserve it.—No party can be invariably right. He therefore who invariably supports it, wants discernment or principle. We desire it therefore to be well remembered, that however we may, in the general course of their measures, approve the conduct of any party, we shall still hold ourselves under no control to agree with them on all occasions, or to sacrifice our own opinions to theirs, or even to be silent when we differ from them. We think that political as well as all other opinions ought only to be asserted or supported when they are conscientiously felt.—We shall therefore endeavor to obtain a correct view of all public affairs, to learn the characters of public men, to observe the tendency of their measures—and we will exhibit the result of our researches to the nation, in plain, open, and temperate language.

We do not fear by thus pursuing this course, that we shall be suspected of aiming at the most foolish and hopeless of all projects—pleasing all parties. Whoever suspects us of this; shall soon see the contrary.

We are far from feeling, and consequently from professing, a perfect apathy as to all the political characters who have been distinguished in our country.—We have like other men our likings and loathings. Nor do we pretend to feel any strict impartiality of judgment, any perfect equality of affection towards the various parties and sects of politicians who have arisen among us. Nor shall we affect any concealment as to these points. We do not hesitate to declare our attachment to the Washington School in Politics, and to avow that a party which may be thought inconsiderable for its numbers, and against which the public voice seemed to have declared, has obtained, by the principles it has generally manifested, and the course it has pursued, more of our regard than any other. On these subjects we shall be always candid and explicit, and hereafter more particular; and perhaps it may be seen, that we even have our prejudices on these subjects.

All we will undertake for, is, to watch ourselves as well as others—to let no blind attachment to men or measures seduce us from a vigilant and faithful discharge of the office we have assumed.

The proceedings of the senate and house of representatives shall be regularly, correctly and impartially given, and such parts of the debates in either house as may be thought interesting and useful to our readers. To give all the debates would be impossible; but when we do give the speeches on any subject, we will always make it a principle to give both sides the question. The resolutions and laws passed by the legislature, will be regularly and seasonably inserted, as will reports from heads of departments, and all other public documents which may be interesting and useful to the politician who wishes to understand the proceedings of the government.

Our readers, who are not fond of politics, need not be frightened at the size of the political part of our address—they may rather consider it has a presage that we shall have as little of the bitterness of politics in our paper, as shall be consistent with our duty. The generality of readers may be addressed to much more advantage, & infinitely more highly benefitted by other topics. Political discussions are seldom useful to the great mass of mankind. An inordinate attachment to politics is certainly the prevailing foible of the present times; and it would be well for every man who seeks this kind of information, to give the time and attention it consumes to more suitable subjects. We shall therefore aim at substituting in the place of politics, whatever we may think more important and interesting to the various classes of society.

The farmer, the merchant and the mechanic, shall each of them have a portion devoted to the service of their respective occupations; and to them and the lovers of light reading and literature, we shall allot no small share of our labours.

We have said more on this subject than we intended, but we could not well say less and be understood.

NORFOLK, July 3.

Mr. Redmon who arrived from Jamaica, (via St. Jago de Cuba) in the ship Fame, and capt. Benthall, have favored us with a file of Jamaica papers to the 30th May. No notice is taken in any of those papers of any insurrection in Jamaica.

On the 17th June, capt. Benthall was boarded in the bite of Leogane, by a British sloop of war, conveying a packet through the passage. Was informed by the captain of the sloop of war, who left Jamaica on the 13th, that a strong force had sailed from that island to assist the Spaniards besieging the city of St. Domingo. That the sloop of war was laden with provisions and stores for that place, to which he should proceed after conveying the packet clear of the passage.

The Jamaica papers, notice the siege of the city of St. Domingo by the Spaniards, but take no notice of the reinforcement and supplies which was stated the French ships that escaped admiral Cochrane, had thrown into that place. We are inclined to believe that the report was incorrect. Such a circumstance could not have occurred without being known in Jamaica, and would have been noticed.

KINGSTON, (Jam.) May 12.

About the end of last month, shortly after the Aurora arrived at St. Domingo, the French by some means mistook her for a vessel from France for their relief; when the harbor-master and commissary came off to her. They were received on board, and allowed after a few hours stay to depart for the shore.

On the 4th instant a schooner in endeavoring to escape from the Aurora, run under the batteries of St. Domingo for protection when she still closely pursued her, and the batteries opened a heavy fire on the Aurora, which wounded four men, one severely, the others slightly.

The advanced guard of the French army, proceeded on the 6th inst. to attack a party of Spaniards encamped near the city, but were completely annoyed by 60 Spaniards ambushed; who killed 40 men and a lieutenant.

The Spaniards have 3,000 encamped round the city of St. Domingo, determined to use every endeavor for its surrender, but the enemy notwithstanding this have retaken Fort Jerome from them.

Although many of the garrison of St. Domingo have been dying from the want of food, they still persist in their determination of rather falling by hunger, than surrendering to the Spaniards, fearful that from a vindictive spirit, they will be all massacred.—Their wants were however relieved by the arrival on the 10th inst. of the Superior schooner, with a supply of provisions from the different vessels she had captured.

ST. JAGO DE LA VEGA, May 20.

The house of assembly yesterday presented the following address to his grace the governor.

"May it please your grace,

"We, his majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects the assembly of Jamaica, beg leave to state to your grace, that from the long continuance of the embargo in the ports of the United States of America, a very great scarcity prevails in this island of all kinds of lumber, and more particularly of white oak staves for puncheons, for which no proper substitute has been discovered, nor has an effectual supply been obtained from any part of the British dominions, although every exertion has been used by the proprietors of estates.

"That for many months after October last, and at a time when Guinea corn was expected to arrive at maturity, and other country provisions were intended to be planted, a very severe drought prevailed, of which the effects are now felt, and will be yet more severely experienced by the inhabitants and their slaves, if measures be not adopted for procuring foreign supplies.

"That, since the removal of the embargo in the United States, large quantities of lumber and provisions have been exported and deposited in the neutral colonies, from whence a supply of these most important and necessary articles could be obtained, if your grace were to exercise the power vested in you by the act of the British parliament, passed in the 28th Geo. III. chap. 6, permitting the importation in British vessels.

"That, by late acts of the imperial parliament, foreign vessels are permitted to carry on this trade; and both policy and necessity warrant our expectations, that your grace will extend the same privilege to British ships, which alone can relieve the wants of the colony.

"Impressed with a just sense of your grace's exertions to promote the prosperity of this country, we humbly submit the present and the impending distresses of its inhabitants to your grace's exercising the power vested in you by the wisdom of parliament for affording relief."

His grace in reply to the above address was pleased to say he would take the opinion of the council.

BRIDGE TOWN, (Barbados) April 22.

The whole tenor of the intelligence from the Saints is gratifying; but, for the present, in a military view, is most satisfactory.—We have possession of the cage, but the birds have flown—the Saints are conquered, but the enemy's squadron has fled! Great prospects, however, still exists of their being captured—indeed, the reputation of our navy, and the superiority of our force, demand and insure it.

The expedition under major-gen. Maitland, for the reduction of the Saints, effected their landing on the morning of the 14th instant, without opposition at Ance-a-bois Jelu; and the rifle companies of the 3d and 4th bat. 60th regiment, were instantly ordered to dislodge a party of the enemy posted on the summit of Morne D'Orange, which they effected with much gallantry, and obtained a commanding position to annoy the enemy's squadron; where having brought up two howitzers, at eight o'clock that night, they opened on the ships with considerable effect, and left him the only alternative of submission or flight. He preferred the latter, and at nine, boldly hazarded an attempt to escape, and with his three line of battle ships pushed through the windward passage. As soon as the enemy's movements were discovered by our troops, the signal was made to apprise our squadron of his intention, and two of our frigates and some of our smaller vessels being off the passage through which he passed, they hung upon his rear ship & kept up a very spirited fire; the admiral in the mean time, in the Neptune, with the Pompee, York, and Captain, being to leeward, crowded all sail in pursuit of them.

At 8 o'clock the next morning (the 15th) the enemy's two frigates, which had still remained embayed, and although in a moment the Intrepid, Swaggar, Dominica and Haughty were at their heels, succeeded in their escape to Guadeloupe, and bro't up under the protection of fort Matilda, not however without much injury, as our ships kept up a running fire on them the whole way; and the Intrepid pursued them so close under the guns of the fort that she received several shot in her hull, had her rigging and sails much cut, and three or four wounded. The enemy, however, secured his retreat.

Our troops, meantime, continued their operations, and major Henderson (on Saturday), with a detachment, drove a party of the enemy from another commanding height in effecting which he had one man killed and nine wounded: and capt. Starke, of the York Rangers, on the same evening surprised one of the enemy's posts, killed one officer and 17 men and made 12 more prisoners.

Our troops also succeeded in cutting off the enemy's supply of water on the south east side; and lieutenant Campbell; (dep. adj. gen.) with major Allen of the 3d W.I. and a detachment of the 3d and 8th W.I. regiments having received orders to drive the enemy from the town and adjacent heights, were in movement for that purpose on the 16th, and cut off their depot of flour near the town. The enemy, thus straitened, on the 17th, surrendered; and the same evening took possession of the whole of his works, and received about 800 men prisoners of war. Our loss throughout was inconsiderable and reflects great credit on major gen. Maitland's promptitude and judgement, consists of one officer killed, and one officer (lieut. Van Kong, 3d battalion 60th) and 60 men wounded. Capt. Dole of the 3d bat. 60th the officer killed, was unfortunately precipitated from the top of an amazingly high cliff, which gave way with him and his party, in endeavoring to surprise the enemy; he has not since been heard of, but his men were taken up much bruised. He was esteemed a very dashing and enterprising officer, and is much regretted by the army. The prisoners were embarked on board the Dolphin, and other ships, and we understand are to be brought to this island.

The reduction of the Saints being thus accomplished, our attention is now exclusively occupied by the hostile squadrons. At the moment the enemy put to sea, sir Alex. Cochrane was meditating an attack on him in his fastnesses, and with that view had actually sounded and surveyed one of the smaller passes which would lead directly on him. He was however, no sooner apprised of his flight, than every effort was made to overtake him; and it is with infinite pleasure we learn by the latest accounts from our squadron, that there is the fairest prospect of our triumph being completed by the capture of the enemy's.

Emma army ship, from Port of Spain, arrived this morning, bringing the gratifying accounts—of the aid-de-camp to major-general Beckwith, informing of the capture of the Saints. At the moment of her departure advices had arrived from sir A. Cochrane, who two days after the enemy's flight, was fast coming up with them. The Recruit battery, was at that time in close proximity to the enemy's sternmost ship, and directed fire on him; and within long shot firing her battery, Neptune (flag ship) was also directed under a heavy press of fire, and Captain fast coming up with them. The whole about 10 miles from the Saints, estimated as are the hostile squadrons and expectations of a triumph over the enemy, seems to be fully accomplished. The French frigates too, although secured under the batteries of the Saints, may yet add to our triumph, and enterprise of our navy, have however carried a very heavy supply to that impoverished colony, ascertained that they had in the Jason, Narcissa, Swaggar, and others, arrived at 2 o'clock this morning, bringing 100 prisoners from the Saints.

Nothing further has transpired in the pursuit and the pursued—the Saints, since our last issue, prevails as to the issue of the enemy's capture, previous to the apprehension of their escape, we submit to our readers an extract of a letter from the admiral, corroborating the correctness of the operations, and the flight of the enemy's squadron:

On Friday morning, the ships on board having arrived, the master of the Neptune ordered a small and narrow channel, and never frequented by land, which the French garrison of the Saints, never expected would be used; and he had succeeded in the channel and ascertaining its depth, admitting even ships of the line, he was discovered by the enemy at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, a signal that every thing was lost, the Castor with the frigates, accompanied by the Pompee, took directly through the channel, and anchored in a small bay, of land between them and the principal batteries: here they landed, during which the enemy without their aid, took possession of the heights, and in the evening having brought up their howitzers, they began to annoy the admiral, with the Pompee, and York cruising off the channel, through which the French ships would end a start. About ten o'clock the enemy were discovered with all sail set, having so far favored their retreat, and signals were immediately sent to the admiral, who stood directly after his boats behind; and he, being fast sailers and weathered, conjectured that they would direct to windward, and escape in the wind's eye.

They, however, having cleared the Saints, bore up directly and made Guadeloupe, and supposed might have been nearly 100 miles by noon, when the admiral put a not to pick it up, and carry it to the full pursuit of the line of battle, of about 5 miles from the Pompee at that moment fired. One of the ships of the enemy, used will escape, as she headed under the top sails only, the studding sails below and aloft, two hours after the escape of the line, the two frigates got out, and got near enough to bring to action; but having got under the Guadeloupe, she was ob-ing to be becalmed in a situation where they would have sunk him in a short time."

The whole of the prisoners (between 8 and 900) taken at the Saints have been sent here.
Under existing circumstances it is a measure highly impolitic and indiscreet, and claims the greatest circumspection and care on the part of the inhabitants, while no doubt the military will be vigilant and watchful. From the great number of them on parole, it would certainly be judicious that they invariably wear their national cockades, the more easily to be distinguished from other foreigners, who may be otherwise confounded with them.

FROM A LONDON PAPER.
Loss of the Travers Indianan.—The following particulars relative to the loss of this vessel are extracted from the letter of her commander, capt. Collins, addressed to lord Minto:—About ten minutes before 5 o'clock A. M. on the 7th of November, when in our station on the starboard quarter of the Monarch, with the Earl Spencer in company, having hove the lead and got ground in 20 fathoms mud and fine sand, I immediately hauled the ship close to the wind, but unfortunately, notwithstanding our exertions to clear the reef, we struck about 5 A. M. on a rock detached from Sunken Island, the other two ships passing considerably within hail. The cause of their escape, I believe, was from my hailing and firing guns. At this time the mizen mast went 15 feet above the board. The ship then bilged on the starboard side, and in about five minutes we lost the rudder, and the stern posts gave way.
Finding it impossible to get the ship off, I ordered the main foremast and spare anchors to be cut away, and threw over the starboard guns to ease her. I then sent an officer down to secure the packets; which I regret was impracticable, as the water was level with the gun deck, part of which had given away.
As it was now day break, and we could distinguish the ships standing on their course, we hoisted our ensign on the stump of our mizen mast, with the union downwards, but not seeing that to have any effect, our only resource was now in our boats, which, with the greatest exertions of the officers & crew, having no masts left to which we could affix tackles, we were obliged to cut the gun-whale down, to launch the long boat, and by dint of strength, a labour which was rendered doubly difficult by the uneasy state of the ship, the sea having by this time made a complete breach over her—by 7 o'clock I had the happiness to see all the ladies, passengers, and crew, with the exception of the 16 men mentioned, in the boats. The weather was so extremely squally, and a heavy sea running, I thought it not safe to allow more than ninety-three persons in the launch she being so extremely deep, and eighteen in the cutter; but ordered the jolly boat back, though she was also very crowded, to endeavor to bring off as many of those remaining as possible; which I am sorry to say from their obstinacy in persist-ing of not coming without their baggage, the officer was unable to effect, excepting three. When we put off our situation was still more distressing, as capt. Hews of the Monarch, the senior officer, followed by the Earl Spencer, had gone so great a distance that we could not discern the ships. I had with me a compass, and steering W. S. W. in about an hour and a half descried them about the distance of 10 or 11 miles. The boat shipping much water kept us constantly bailing, which gave me at one time much apprehension from the severity of the weather of our not being able to reach them. But to our great joy about 11 A. M. we were safe on board the earl Spencer.

Names of the persons left on the wreck.—
T. Tracey, carpenter's mate; J. Green, quarter master; W. Hoff, Peter Olson, Jacob Bergman and F. Smith, seamen, three Lascars and seven China men.
The loss of the Travers is stated at one hundred and eighty thousand pounds, besides 500 pipes of Madeira wine and several valuable investments, she had treasure on board to a large amount.

RECOMMENDATION.
THE Superintendent of Police recommends to the citizens of Alexandria, during the warm season, a frequent use of LIME in their Privies and other parts of their premises where filth accumulates—and the greatest attention is required to the keeping clean and dry their cellars, so that no stagnant water be left in them.
He particularly requests the proprietors of unoccupied houses and cellars to cause them frequently to be opened and aired—housekeepers are required to cause all the rubbish accumulated in their back yards to be thrown into the streets that the scavengers carts may take it away.

BOOKSELLER, KING-STREET
The following highly valuable MEDICINE
Price 3 Dollars per bottle.
DR. JEBB'S
NATURE'S RESTORATIVE,
A BALSAMIC CORDIAL.

THIS cordial, so justly celebrated throughout Great Britain and the continent of Europe, for its superior efficacy in the cure of all disorders excited by nervous irritability as well as in complaints of complete debility whether arising from irregularities of living, long continued residence in warm climates, immoderate pursuits of excessive pleasures, or that destructive habit of inconsiderate youth, which brings on so prematurely the infirmities of old age.

In removing pulmonary affections, asthmas and all disorders of the lungs, it is the most powerful remedy ever yet found, and the relief it has afforded even in the last stage of consumptions, is without a parallel; with regard to its efficacy in this baneful, and unfortunately the prevailing disorder in this country (consumption) its superiority is such as to have supplanted every other medicine.

Those who in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, will find themselves restored to health and strength, and all those melancholy symptoms removed, which are the general effects of such causes.

In short, animated by the uniform success this invaluable cordial has experienced in Europe, the thousands it has renovated, when bending under the pressure of nervous, consumptive or hypochondriacal disorders (many attested proofs of which from eminently distinguished persons in this quarter of the globe, are now in the possession of the proprietor here, some few of which are herein published have determined the introduction of it into this continent, where its efficacy must soon become so prized as to make it considered a beneficent remedy not to be dispensed with by those who are anxious to preserve or acquire their health.

The chief ingredient of this cordial is as pant whose rare and precious salutary virtues were well known to the Arabians during the 8th and 9th centuries, when that people shone conspicuous over all the nations of the world for their learning and skill in eradicating baneful diseases incident to the human frame, renovating infirmity to vigor, and restoring the sickly to sound and rosy health, and which, as known at this time by their descendants, and used and experienced as the most sove-persons, travellers, &c. ought constantly to carry with them that medicine which will counteract the unpleasant effects of their perilous duties, and especially those pains to which their situation must expose them. To those who reside in or visit the West-Indies, and other warm climates, they will be found upon trial to convey the most lasting service and will gradually destroy all tendency to disease in the human frame, and preserve health and vigor. Although a great variety of prescriptions have been published to cure the disorders enumerated above, none has yet equalled the GOUT AND RHEUMATIC DROPS of DR. TISSOT, which are celebrated throughout the European continent, and whose unbounded benefits are fully authenticated by certificates already published of gentlemen so well known in America, being of the first consequence in the state of Maryland: General Charles Ridgely, of Hampton; John Gibson, Esq. one of the directors of the Farmers' Bank of Maryland; John Macubbin, Esq. Mrs. Macubbin, his wife; and Mrs. Ryan, of Calton. Ample certificates and affidavits of the beneficial effects of these medicines may be seen by applying as above.

Valuable Property for Sale.

Pursuant to a deed of trust made by ELISHA JANNEY to the subscriber for the benefit of his creditors, will be exposed to public sale, before the tavern door of Zachariah Ward, in the town of Occoquan, at twelve o'clock, on FRIDAY, the twenty-first of next month—

That valuable MILL-SEAT,

the property of the said Janney, situate in the said town of Occoquan. On this site was erected, about ten years ago, a spacious three story brick mill house, which ever since has been occupied as a manufacturing mill until about five weeks ago it was destroyed by fire: the stone work of the mill and a considerable part of the brick work still stands and would be found sufficiently substantial to erect new work upon it—considerable part of the iron work would also answer for a new mill, which might with these aids be erected in time to grind the growing crop of wheat. The advantages appertaining to this valuable property which in the driest season never wants water, are so generally known as hardly to need a particular enumeration. Suffice it to state, that it is situated in a healthy and flourishing little town at the falls of Occoquan river, about 16 miles south of Alexandria, on the great stage road leading from north to south, in the heart of a fine wheat country, and has navigable tide water to the mill door where vessels may come of sufficient burthen to carry 400 to 500 barrels of flour.

ALSO,

At the same time and place will be exposed to sale,

The TANYARD and the Improvement thereon, which are calculated for the carrying on the tanning business to advantage and on a large scale, together with the stock of Leather, &c. on hand.

ALSO,

Will be exposed for sale, at the same time and place,

One undivided Moiety of a Tract of Land, containing about 500 acres, situate on the north side of the Occoquan river, very valuable from the quantity of fine timber which it contains.

Terms of sale for the real property will be—Ten per cent on the purchase money payable within 60 days by negotiable notes well endorsed—for the residue a credit will be given of one, two and three years on equal payments with interest from the date, and a deed of trust upon the property to secure the payments will be required.

For further particulars, those who may desire to purchase will be pleased to apply to Mr. Nathaniel Ellicott, at Occoquan, or to the subscriber at Bush-Hill, near Alexandria.
